Father Tim's Daily Reflections

Monday 13 April

Easter Monday

2.30pm – It's my 'day off' – but as usual, Monday is my laundry and house cleaning day. I'll fold my jocks and socks later this evening, but it's washed and dried. After a bowl of Special K with sliced banana, some toast and a glass of V-8 juice, and reading the paper (not much in it as usual), I finished off today's PowerPoint for Mass, plus worked on my homily, selected hymns for this week, and sent that off to Alessio and Theodore so they can prepare.

At 1.00pm, our school's Assistant Principal Mac Callisto paid me a visit to help me clean my new coffee machine. I can't figure out the manual, written by some Chinese bloke, as I told you earlier. So Mac walked me through it (they have the same machine at school). She also brought me some good Italian food prepared by her mother, so I'm looking forward to having that. Mac and I had a nice chat out on my veranda for a while before she returned home.

My desk is an absolute disaster! But I'm going to ignore that for now, and take a nap before the evening Mass. Later!
